

What is a Prime? Why are they important?

You may often hear the terms “Prime Vendor”, “Top Prime” or “Prime Contractor” in relation to procurement and acquisitions with the government, but what does that mean? Simply put, a “Prime” is the main company chosen to perform the work or provide the product/service required in a government contract. A subcontractor is a company that works with/under a prime contractor to perform the work offered in a government solicitation.

Generally, a prime contractor is a larger business that has a relationship with the government. Common names like Raytheon, Lockheed Martin, Booz Allen Hamilton, CACI, IBM, and Leidos are examples of large prime contractors. These are companies that have a long-standing procurement relationship with the government and are at times given preferential treatment with contracts.

Prime Contractors are important because many of their contracts have requirements to set aside portions of their work to give to small businesses, either because the large company can’t provide the service or because they are mandated to set aside a certain percentage for subcontractors. Many of these large prime contractors have registration portals where you can go and register your business as a potential subcontractor on their large government contracts. This is a way for you to introduce your business and begin to market your services/products to these large prime contractors.

Our marketing packages include Select GCR registering your company with top primes, and we recommend that continue to register your business with as many as you can! Many small businesses struggle with getting started in government contracting and often being a subcontractor is a great way to get started and begin to build a past performance portfolio that could help get you noticed for priming your own contracts!

How do I register once I've found a good prime?

Let's say we want to register our business with Accenture. The next step is figuring out where their registration portal is. For this, we need to do a simple google search of (name of company) + supplier registration

As you can see, the portal comes right up, most often it will be the top result but lookout for terms like “supplier portal” and “register” or “vendor management” and you will be in the right place. If it doesn’t, you might need to look on the prime’s website for a “Working with us” or “Partnership” section to find the area to register as a subcontractor. It’s also possible that the prime does not offer a registration portal or website and you need to contact the POC of the prime to inquire about registering your business. For instance, in the Accenture website, once we click the link at the top we have to scroll down and find this section.

Make sure to read the site and see what documents are needed to register. Often you will need your capabilities statement and the information found on that document. UEI, EIN, Address, Point of Contact information, NAICS, NIGP/commodity codes, a signed w9, number of employees, revenue estimates and ACH information are common requirements for these types of registrations. Here are the requirements for Accenture, for example.

Register as a Supplier

Please click Register now to begin the "registration" process. You will need the following information to complete your registration.

- Company name, Doing Business As (DBA name), Federal Tax ID, Dun and Bradstreet number
- Year established, revenue for the last 3 years, legal structure
- NAICS/SIC codes, commodity/category codes, product/service description
- Company address, Primary and Secondary Point of Contacts
- Upload valid supplier documents such as current Diversity certificates issued by National, State, City and Local Councils/Agencies, ethnicity, gender, ownership

Once you have gone through the steps and registered, you will usually be provided with the ability to create a username and password and have a portal where you can build a profile and check on opportunities with that top prime.

Where can I find more primes?

There are other areas to find more primes if you are interested and have exhausted the top 200 primes in Select GCR Pro. Here are a few great places to get more primes.

<https://www.sba.gov/document/support-directory-federal-government-prime-contractors-subcontracting-plans> - This website has a yearly list of over 60,000 prime contractors, and their NAICS and prior award amounts. You can find some other smaller primes this way and use google like we did above to find their registration portals by searching (company name) + supplier registration.

www.usaspending.gov – this powerful website can also find your local primes that are currently getting work from the government. Here is a guide for using USASpending.gov to find primes.

- 1) Navigate to www.usaspending.gov and click on "Start Searching Awards"

2) The menu on the left-hand side is a powerful tool you can use to narrow down the search results.

> Keyword ⓘ	> Award ID
> Time Period	> CFDA Program
> Award Type	> Disaster Emergency Fund Code (DEFC)
> Agency	> North American Industry Classification System (NAICS)
> Treasury Account Symbol (TAS)	> Product or Service Code (PSC)
> Location	> Type of Contract Pricing
> Recipient	> Type of Set Aside
> Recipient Type	> Extent Completed
> Award Amount

Let's use a keyword of "computer", the year 2022, and the state of Colorado as our example. Once you've set what parameters you would like, hit submit search. The output is a list of awarded contracts with the parameters you requested with names and amounts.
